Meono – Talk of art

Is it the human who connects with art, or art that connects with the human?

Meono – talk of art is a project about the dialogue between a human and art. A dialogue where, at times, you may find yourself speaking with the artwork, and at other times with yourself. Each encounter can be different, and each one can be honest.

Sometimes you speak more.

Sometimes the artwork does.

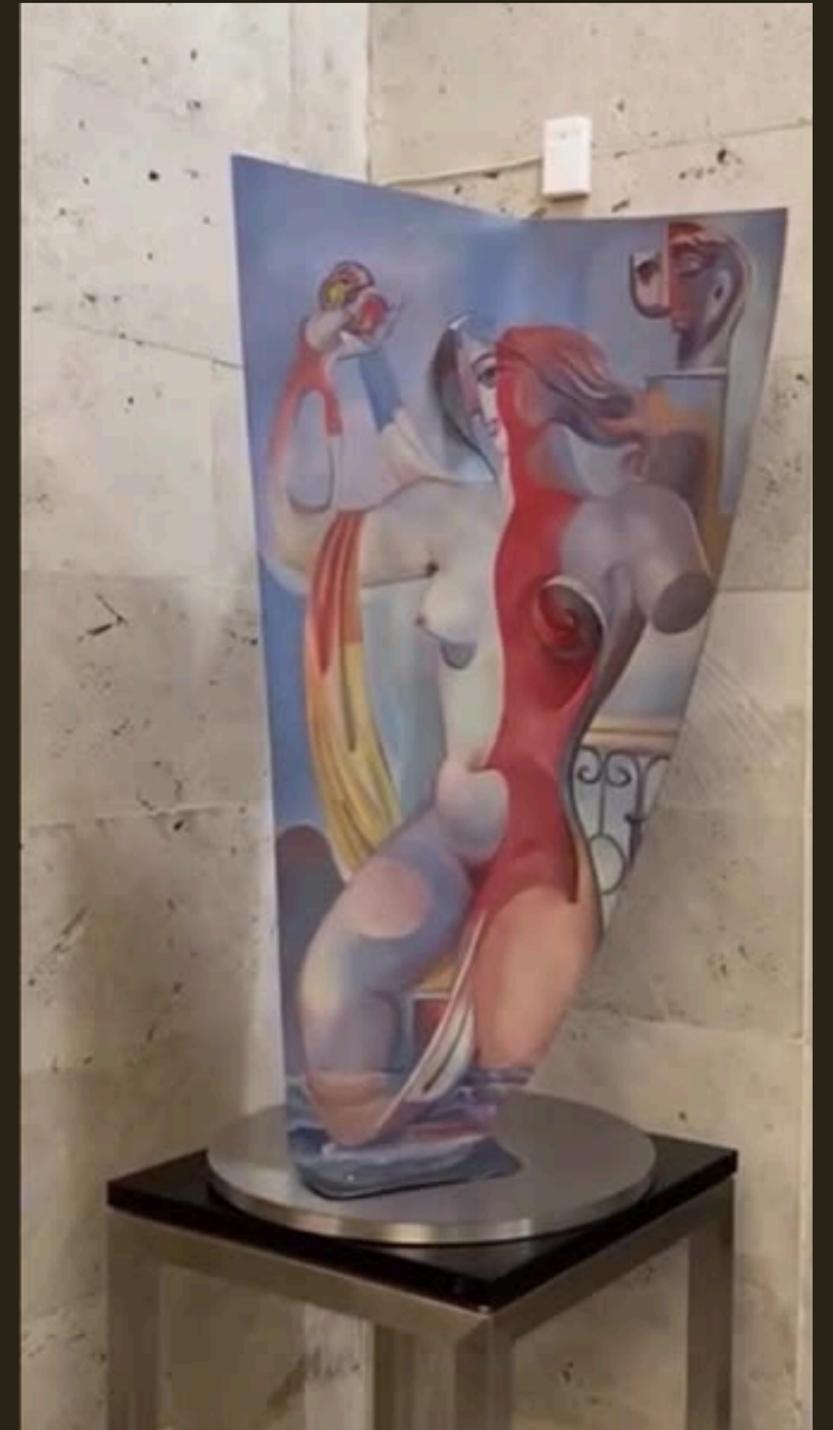

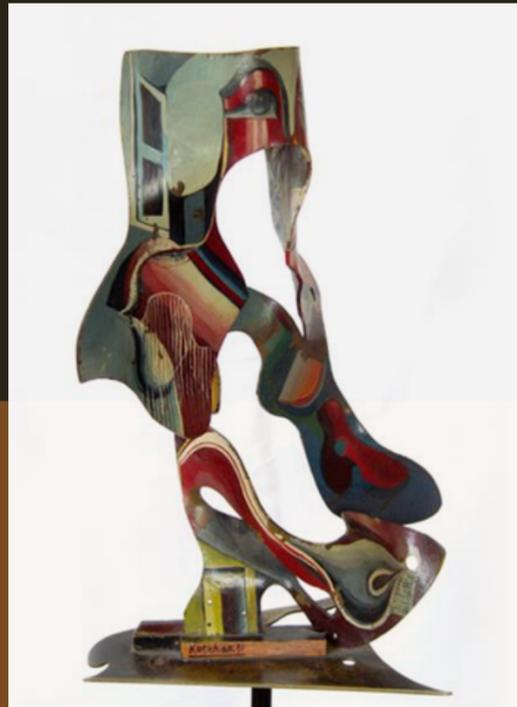

Sometimes you stay silent, waiting for an answer.

Sometimes you speak endlessly, not leaving space for the other voice.

MY INSPIRATION

My idea was actually born around two years ago, when I first became acquainted with the works of Ervand Kochar in his gallery.

Since then, my project has been revealing new versions of itself from every viewpoint, gradually telling its own story.

TECHNIQUES

1. Shibori dyeing
2. Biomaterial – combining linen with biomaterial
3. Origami making – breaking the origami shape lines
4. Electronics integration – stepper motor + two distance sensors
5. Making the frame
6. Strengthening and assembling everything together

A dialogue between nature-made and human-made
